EDUX 7905: Cultivating Language, Literature, and Literacy

Podcast/Streaming Recommendations:

- To the classroom with Jennifer Serravallo Join Jennifer as she interviews leading researchers and scholars to understand current, relevant, and digestible answers to all things literacy, learning, and best-practice, regardless of an educator's approach to literacy instruction. Jennifer is joined by colleagues to answer the question, "How will we take what we've learned to the classroom?"
- Teaching Literacy Podcast Jake, host of the Teaching Literacy Podcast, holds a PhD in literacy and leadership from Utah State University and is an Elementary Literacy Coordinator at a local school district. This podcast bridges literacy research to practice.
- Melissa & Lori Love Literacy Melissa & Lori are your classroom-next-door teacher friends turned podcasters learning with you. Episodes feature top literacy experts and teachers who are putting the science of reading into practice. Melissa & Lori bridge the gap between the latest research and your day-to-day teaching.
- Literacy Talks Each episode features a trio of literacy champions: Stacy Hurst, an assistant professor of reading at Southern Utah University and Chief Academic Advisor at Reading Horizons; Donell Pons, a dyslexia specialist, educator, presenter, and writer, who now works with adults with reading challenges; and Lindsay Kemeny, a dedicated elementary teacher who is a CERI-certified Structured Literacy Classroom Teacher and author of 7 Mighty Moves.
- The Literacy View The Literacy View invites viewers to sit with Faith Borkowsky and Judy Boksner to discuss best literacy practices in easy-to-implement ways. The women are educators and literacy coaches. Faith and Judy encourage all educators to enter lively discussions about literacy's most pressing issues.
- The Literacy Teacher's Life This podcast is for teachers and parents who are dedicated to helping young readers and writers thrive. Children are naturally curious and it's our role as parents and teachers to provide them with support so they learn to love reading and writing.
- Inspire Literacy Are you looking for some inspiration to improve your literacy instruction?
