EDUX 7908: Cultivating Methods of Instruction

Podcast/Streaming Recommendations:

- This Teacher Life Inspired by a “terribly” boring professional development experience, teacher Monica Genta created her own platform for teachers to access practical, meaningful, and impactful professional development that sticks. Every week, the six-time author, speaker, and educational consultant publishes a new podcast episode with so-simple-they’re-almost-ridiculous tips for improving the daily classroom experience for teachers and students alike.
- The Learning Scientists Podcast This education podcast is a little bit different in that it’s produced by scientists, not teachers. In each episode, the hosts examine a different aspect of human learning cognition, with the goal of helping educators, students, caregivers, and administrators identify and develop better teaching and learning habits.
- The 10 Minute Teacher Podcast This teacher podcast brings you the freshest insights, innovative strategies, and heartwarming stories from remarkable educators (just like you!) around the globe. And the best part? It all happens in just 10 minutes – because we know that even superheroes like you are racing against the clock.
- The Spark Creativity Teacher Podcast At The Spark Creativity Teacher Podcast, discover you’re not alone as a creative English teacher. You’re part of a vast community welcoming students to their next escape room, rolling out contemporary poetry and reading aloud on First Chapter Fridays, engaging kids with social media projects and real-world ELA units.
- The Direct Instruction Podcast Given the long history of proven effectiveness of Direct Instruction, I thought I’d start a podcast about it: The Direct Instruction Podcast. It is aimed at DI practitioners, but it is also for educators who want to explore ways to take their explicit teaching model to the next level.
- The Education Table Hosted by Katie Novak, a lifelong educator, author, and mother of four, the podcast is dedicated to fostering inclusive and innovative educational systems. Each episode offers a mix of stories, statistics, and strategies designed to establish balance for teachers and enhance outcomes for all learners.
- Intentional Teaching Intentional Teaching is a podcast aimed at educators to help them develop foundational teaching skills and explore new ideas in teaching. Hosted by educator and author Derek Bruff, the podcast features interviews with educators throughout higher ed.
