EDUX 7911: Cultivating Social Studies and History

Podcast/Streaming Recommendations:

- Wigs For Whigs History Discussions of topics in history and politics, from a high school history teacher. Views expressed are only those of the speaker(s), and not of any places of employment or affiliated organizations.
- Distorted History Hosted by a history teacher and musician, the podcast covers a topic from American history ranging from the important to the cultural to the weird and unusual. Bonus episodes focus on the creation on a piece of music be it a modern rock album to classical music or the lore of video game.
- The Teaching History Her Way Podcast Let's talk a little hidden history, a little pedagogy, and a lot of ways we can improve our teaching and mindset so that our history and social studies classrooms tell a more complete, diverse human story.
- What I Wish I Learned An overqualified middle school history teacher gives you all the history you wish you learned in school.
- History Teachers Talking History Teachers Talking is a bi-weekly podcast dedicated to providing you with an entertaining way to learn about history from your friendly neighborhood history teachers. Every weekend, Thomas Reszka and Peter Zablocki will talk to you about random history, pop culture, politics, and education in a way that sounds like you are sitting in the classroom having a fun discussion with your favorite teacher. The conversation is always very straightforward, light-hearted, and easy to follow.
- History Teachers Club Caitlin and Dan are history teachers with a burning passion for teaching, history, and engaging students and they are here to share that fire! Each week they discuss their favorite lessons, unique engagement strategies, Caitlin's history costumes and room decor, inspiring figures and stories in history, and the wonderful madness from their students and classrooms.
- Voicemails from History History is created using the evidence that people leave behind, sometimes in documents and photo albums, other times on scraps and footsteps here and there. A graduate and teacher of history shares and reviews books covering a range of historical events, people and memories.
- Through the Ages Welcome to Through the Ages: A History Podcast. Whether you are a lifelong learner looking to dive deeper into stories of the past OR one of my many AP World History students cramming for the exam, explore history through the ages with your host Sara. As a medieval historian and high school World History teacher, Sara spent a lot of time learning the history of the world. Now, she wants to share the incredible history of the world with you!
