This course requires 45 hours of class sessions, outside practicum, research and active instructional learning. Flexible scheduling.

COURSE DESCRIPTION: This course will emphasize the wealth and important curriculum implications that community resources, museums, and natural and historical sites have on student achievement. The course includes application to all study skills, portfolios and content across the curriculum. Rich resources for language arts, social science, multicultural studies, art and math will be examined. Participants will evaluate in depth the implications of the study tour for their grade level and cross section of ability levels before and after taking a visitation. This is a wonderful opportunity to enrich the classroom experience of your pupils and motivate them to read and write about the things they have seen.
