Course #EDUX 5710 A, B, C or D (A New Course)

WHEN: March 5 - 19 (includes online and outside practicum)

COURSE DESCRIPTION: In this course participants will explore all aspects of the teaching/learning process that may contribute to stress in both educators and their students. Educators will develop organizational skills and strategies to alleviate the effects of pressure and anxiety. Because classroom and work-related stress can undermine teachers’ ability to do their jobs effectively, techniques designed to help educators and students lower stress levels will be presented. Critical topics including relaxation techniques, room environment changes and interpersonal model changes will be addressed. Participants will share issues they confront in their classrooms and on their campuses and develop plans to make them more manageable.

NOTE - courses will be presented in our new ONLINE/HYBRID format - Information will be emailed upon enrollment, and course will consist of 45 total hours of online learning and outside practicum.
